

Application Activity: Getting Things Done

Name: Leida Josefina Pereira Hidrogo

Instructions

Follow the steps below to complete this assignment. Please make sure to scroll all the way to the bottom of this document and answer every question.

Part 1: Write Lower-Level Goals

Think back on your reading about goals and habits. Completing PathwayConnect can be seen as a mid or top-level goal. Write at least three lower-level goals that will help you reach the higher goal of completing PathwayConnect. Each goal should relate to your use of time.

Fill in the list below:

1. Your Lower-level Goal:

To study 10 hours every week, divided into 2-hour sessions from Monday to Friday, focusing on the assigned tasks and readings.

How will the goal help you complete PathwayConnect?

This goal ensures that I am dedicating a consistent and sufficient amount of time to the PathwayConnect academic workload. By dividing it into manageable daily blocks of 2 hours, I avoid procrastination and burnout, and it allows me to review the material regularly. The daily focus on tasks and readings enables me to submit assignments on time and participate in group meetings in an informed way.

2. Your Lower-level Goal:

Establish a fixed weekly schedule for PathwayConnect group gatherings and ensure it does not overlap with other obligations, and invest 30 minutes before for preparation.

How will the goal help you complete PathwayConnect?

Active participation in the group gatherings is an essential component for success in PathwayConnect. By setting a fixed time and protecting that time block, I ensure my attendance and my ability to contribute. The 30 minutes of preparation will guarantee that I have completed my coursework and am ready to engage in meaningful discussions, which will enhance my learning and help me earn a good grade.

3. Your Lower-level Goal:

Plan 1 hour every Sunday afternoon/evening for the following week, including reviewing all PathwayConnect assignments and scheduling my study sessions.

How will the goal help you complete PathwayConnect?

This goal focuses on organization and foresight. By dedicating time to weekly planning, I can identify potential time conflicts in advance, prioritize the most important PathwayConnect tasks, and allocate specific time blocks for study. This will reduce last-minute stress and ensure my time is used efficiently and productively to meet all of the program's requirements.

Part 2: Create a Pacing Guide

A pacing guide helps you work on the lower-level goals you set above. It should help you plan your time through a typical week. Include any activity that you feel will impact your goals.

Please answer the questions on the next page →

1. Fill these in according to the time you recorded in the chart above.
 - Each week, I dedicate 20 hours to my first goal from Part 1 above.
 - Each week, I dedicate 1 hours to my second goal from Part 1 above.
 - Each week, I dedicate 1 hours to my third goal from Part 1 above.
2. How will this pacing guide help you attain these lower-level goals?

My goal is to complete PathwayConnect. To achieve this, I have established three lower-level goals focused on the efficient use of my time. First, I commit to studying a total of 20 hours each week, distributing this time into fixed 2-hour daily sessions from Monday to Friday, and dedicating the remaining time as needed. This ensures that I will be able to complete all readings and assignments on time and efficiently. Second, my objective is to establish and protect a fixed weekly schedule for group meetings, including 30 minutes of preparation before each session to ensure informed and active participation. Finally, to maintain order, I have decided to dedicate 1 hour every Sunday night to plan the following week, reviewing all assignments and organizing my study blocks. This Sunday planning is key, as it allows me to streamline the organization process and, by specifying the material to review, ensures I am always prepared for the group meetings.
